

are analyzed and discussed in detail, and important formulas are plotted graphically in numerous illustrations, so that their conclusions remain accessible to those who choose to skip the mathematical parts.

What finally remains is the hope of the author that he may have succeeded to present the binocular from an unusual perspective, and that the reader may deepen his understanding about the technical aspects of optical instruments and optical observation in an entertaining, and sometimes challenging manner.

Dr. Holger Merlitz,
Professor, Dep. of Physics,
Xiamen University,
361005 Xiamen, China